THE STRANGER'S GRAVE.

At the request of a lady friend we reproduce from the Saturday Museum, at one time a literary newspaper in Philadelphia, the subjoined lines, written by the editor of the FREEMAN more than thirty years ago:

From the Saturday Museum.

The following lines are the production of a gentleman residing in Ebensburg. They were written, we are told, several years ago, when the author was but a youth, and contain much sweetness and poetic beauty. Had the writer applied himself to the delightful "Art of Poetry" with as much energy and spirit as he has devoted to another, not less profitable, but more arduous and unetherial pursuit, he might have attained a high rank in the galaxy of American Bards.

THE STRANGER'S GRAVE.

Behold! amid this solitude,
With moss and wild flowers crowned,
Yon heap of earth, unshapely, rude—
The stranger's funeral mound.

Near by he died—far from the place
His youthful days were reared,
Where not a single human face
His dying moments cheered.

No man of God to rouse him up
To exercise his faith;
No Heaven-sped prayer to strengthen hope,
And fit his soul for death.

No pious father to prepare
His soul for its last flight;
No mother to bestow her care
And cheer death's gloomy night.

No brother to attend his bed,
And heave affection's sigh;
No sister to support his head,
With tearful, anxious eye.

No tender wife to kneel and weep
In sorrow by his side—
To close his eyes in their last sleep,
And mourn for him that died!

Ah! so, there was not even a friend
To shed one kindly tear—
No drops from pity's eye descend
On his unhonored bier.

And here no consecrated ground
Receives the humble dead;
No mockeries of art surround
The stranger's lowly bed.

No marble slab preserves a name
To read in after times—
His worth and virtues to proclaim,
But to conceal his crimes.

His fellow worms, when here they stray,
May thoughtless view the spot,
And wild beasts roam above his clay,
Yet he regards them not.

He sleeps amid the forest's gloom,
And peaceful be his rest;
May earliest wild flowers deck the tomb
Above the stranger's breast. R. L. J.

SKATORIAL CURTAIN LECTURE.

"Oh! go to sleep you old fool!"

"Mr. Twain, I am surprised and grieved to—"

"Don't interrupt me, woman! I tell you it is absurd—you learn to skate! You'll be wanting to play fairy in the 'Black Crook' next. I tell you skating is an accomplishment suited only to youth and grace and comeliness of face and symmetry of figure. Nothing is so charming as to see a beautiful girl, in the coquetish costume of the rinks, with cheeks rosy with exertion, and eyes beaming with excitement, skimming the ice like a bird—and swooping down upon a group of gentlemen, and pretending she can't stop herself, and landing in the arms of the very young man her father don't allow her to know—and darting away again and falling on her head and exposing herself—exposing herself to remarks about her carelessness, Madam—hold your tongue!—and always taking care to fall when that young man is close by to pick her up. It is charming! They look pretty and interesting, too, when they are just learning—when they stand still a long time in one place, and then start one foot out gingerly, and it makes a break for the other side of the pond and leaves the balance of the girl sprawling on this side. But you! You look fat and awkward and dismal enough any time; but when you are on skates you waddle off as stuffy, and stupid and ungainly as a buzzard that's had half a horse for dinner. I won't have it, Madam! And you get under a little precarious headway and then put your feet together and drift along, stooping your head and shoulders and holding your arms out like you expected a church was going to fall on you; it aggravates the life out of me! And Tuesday, when I was ass enough to get on skates myself, and kicked the Irish Giant's eye out the first dash, and lit on my head and cracked the ice so that it looked like the sun with all its rays had dropped where I struck, and they fined me ninety-two dollars for ruining the man's pond. I was terrified with the conviction that I had gone through to the inside of the world, because I saw the parallels of latitude glimmering all around me; and what was it but you, in your confoundedness, frothing up over me with your confounded 'sisters' on? You've got to discard those things. I can't stand the paw rent, and I won't!"

"Mr. Twain, I am surp—"

"Hold your clatter! I tell you you shan't bring odium upon the family by your disgraceful attempts to skate, sprawling around with your big feet like a cow plowing her way down hill in slippery weather. May be you wouldn't be so handy about displaying those feet of yours if you knew what occurred when I took your shoes down to get mended."

"What was it? Tell me what it was; tell me what it was this minute! I just know it's one of your lies!"

"Oh! don't mind; it aint of any consequence; go to sleep."

"But it is of consequence! You've got to tell me; you shan't aggravate me this way; I won't go to sleep till I know what it was."

"Oh! it wasn't anything."

"Mr. Twain, I know better! You're just doing this to drive me to distraction. What did that shoemaker say about my shoe? What did he do? Quick!"

"Well, if you must know, he—he—however, it's of no consequence."

"Mr. Twain."

"Well, he—he took it and gazed upon it a long time in silence, and put his handkerchief to his eyes and burst into tears."

"Why, you born fool! Twain, are you going stark, staring crazy?"

"He just stood there and wept as if his heart would break, poor devil! There now, let's go to sleep."

"Sleep, you lunatic! I'll never close my eyes till I know what that idiot was crying about—and you won't either, I can tell you that. Come!"

"Oh! it don't matter."

"Mr. Twain, if you say that again, I lay I'll make you sorry for it; what was that numskull crying about?"

"Well, he—he—

"W-e-l-l, he. Out with it! do you want me to—to—Twain, I'll snatch them pot fringes off till the sides of your head's as bald as the top of it!"

"Well, he—poor fellow!—he said he doted on his dear grandmother—fairly doted on her. She had nursed him, you know, because his mother was always feeble, and so— Well, he came to this country fifteen years ago, and first he set up in the vegetable line, and got along pretty well, and was about to send to England for the old lady, when hard times came and he got broke. He went into fruit then, and after that into milk—into all sorts of things, you know; but he got disappointed every time till this present business fetched him out at last, all right, and he sent right off for the old woman. She landed here four weeks ago, but died the very same night. It was hard, very hard, after all his waiting and toiling for fifteen years, to get her over here at last and have her die on his hands. He—he—well, he was disgusted. However, he laid her out, and he and his friends sat up with her, and by and by the memory of her virtues softened his bitterness and turned it to a tender grief—a settled melancholy that hung about his spirits like a pall for many days. However, by patiently striving to keep sad thoughts out of his mind, he was finally beginning to regain some little of his old time cheerfulness, when your shoe reminded him so painfully of his poor sainted grandmother's coffin—"

"Take that, you brute! and if you dare to come back here I'll kick you out again! You degraded old ruffian!"

MARK TWAIN.

AN EXCHANGE says the following is an excellent recipe for croup: Wring a linen cloth—cotton will do, but linen is preferable—out of cold water, fold it so as to make several thicknesses, and place it on the child's throat and chest, then fold a dry flannel and wrap carefully over it. Warm the child's feet—with hot stones if necessary—and cover with plenty of bed clothes and let it go to sleep; you cannot perceive when it wakes that it has even a cold. It acts like a charm.

MENTAL ARITHMETIC.—Teacher—"Look here, Charlie—supposing you had twenty sugar-plums, and you wanted to divide them into four parts. You give five to baby and five to Carrie—now what would you do with the other ten?"

Scholar—"Suck 'em."

A LIVE STORY.

A correspondent of the Butte Record, writing from San Francisco, thus describes a night spent at a hotel in that city:

"I got in late on the boat, and on calling for a bed was shown by the very polite clerk to my room, where I was left with a very small dim lamp and a box of matches; while setting them down, I accidently upset the matches, and on picking them up found I had just eighty-two. How I came to count them I don't know, but I distinctly recollect the number. After my usual devotional exercises, I blew out the light and retired. Hardly had I lain down than I felt something crawling. Hastily striking the light, I discovered the intruder to be a bedbug of enormous proportions, and not being at all friendly with this kind of companion I dropped him in the water-pitcher, and also the stomp of the match, to prevent accident from fire—nothing like being careful you know. Hardly lain down again before another nip, another light, another bug—same disposal with both. The operation I kept up—a nip, a light, a bug, until my matches gave out, when I weakened and dropped asleep, in spite of the many hints I received that the enemy were still in the field. How long I slept I know not; when I was awakened by strains of the sweetest and most delicious music. I got up and took a look to see if there was not some band serenading either Queen Emma or myself, but failed to see it. Still the same music—boys from our men-of-war, thought I, as I recognized the air to be nautical. But just then a fresh burst of melody broke forth seemingly in my very room. Stepping up to my pitcher, what was my surprise to see the bugs with the matches formed into a raft, and sitting upon it, with their heads thrown back, singing,

"A life on the ocean wave."

A VERY HASTY WEDDING.—A somewhat novel and romantic marriage took place in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, about two weeks since, which may interest the lady portion of our readers. A wedding was announced to take place in the evening at one of the churches, and of course the seats were crowded—for there are thousands of persons who will go to see a man married or hanged who would not venture out on any other ordinary or extraordinary occasion. Among the spectators were a widower and widow, both in the noonday of life, who happened to sit together in the same pew. They had a slight acquaintance, and very naturally whispered together upon the appearance of the bridegroom at the altar. At about the conclusion of the ceremony the gentleman sighed very audibly and whispered to his companion, "Poor things! I hate to see them start out in the world alone; I'd like to keep the poor creatures company to-night." "So would I," sighed the widow. "Then say we do," said the widower, a bright idea striking him, "Agreed," responded the widow. The first ceremony was no sooner through, accordingly, than up marched the hero and heroine of our story to the altar, and in less time than a trice were made one flesh, to the utter bewilderment of the assemblage.

FELT HAPPY.—A clergyman in an adjoining town, who is being blessed with a revival of religion in his church, went one evening to attend a neighboring prayer meeting. The house was full, and all present seemed deeply interested in the exercises. At the close of the meeting he invited all those who desired to hold a personal conversation with him as to the state of their feelings to remain. Quite a number did so, and among them a "hardy son of toil," whom we will call Mr. B. The good minister, in his round of conversation with each one, came to him, and upon inquiring the state of his feelings, received the reply that he "felt happy." "Ah, indeed," said the preacher; "I am rejoiced to hear you say so; may I inquire how long you have enjoyed this frame of mind?" "Perhaps mostly since last week," said Mr. B. "Well, my friend," said the clergyman, "To what particular event, or circumstance, or occasion do you trace this happy change in your feelings?" "Well, Mr. Minister," replied Mr. B., "I reckon perhaps the news of the election of Mr. English for Governor of the State of Connecticut was about the spot to start from." The minister bit his lip and passed on to the next.

AN enterprising thief in Lynchburg has been depredating upon hen roosts and other roosts for some time past in the guise of a hog. A few nights ago he was detected, threw off his dirty blanket, and went off on good biped time. The "hog" is requested in the News to call and get his blanket.

PISTOL SHOOTING EXTRAORDINARY.—The New York Citizen tells the following Munchausenish stories about Recorder Hackett's pistol-shooting prowess:

Recorder Hackett can do more remarkable things with a pistol than any man living—probably that has ever lived. He can split bullets on the edge of a knife twelve times out of twelve at twenty paces. He will take the ashes off a friend's cigar, held in the friend's mouth, at the same distance. He will pick away a quarter held between a friend's finger and thumb at thirty yards, with unerring certainty. He will shoot half-dollars propped upright from a friend's head. He will kill a mosquito on the wall as far as he can see the "anamile;" and all these things he will do in any attitude you please—the pistol held on a level with his forehead and turned upside down, fired off between his legs, in a recumbent position—in fact, in any way or every way that will only allow one glance of the unerring eye along the barrel. Give him three shots with a crooked pistol to guage its inaccuracies, and he will use it as readily as the most familiar weapon. Indeed one of his favorite pistols is a little ivory-hilted repeater which throws nearly five feet out of gunge in a distance of thirty yards. Judge Hackett has ascertained and makes exact allowance for this eccentricity, and would just as soon shoot a match with this latter weapon as with the most accurate Colt, Derringer or Manton in his armory.

IT'S DARK.—The following beautiful sentiments are from Meister Karl's Sketch Book, entitled "The Night of Heaven." It is full of touches of tenderness: "It is dark when the honest and honorable man sees the results of long years swept cruelly away by the knavish, heartless adversary. It is dark when he feels the clouds of sorrow gather round, and knows that the hopes and happiness of others are fading with his own. But in that hour the memory of past integrity will be a true consolation, and assure him even here on earth of gleams of the light of heaven. It is dark when the dear voice of that sweet child, once so fondly loved, is no more heard around in fourners. Dark when the light pattering feet no more resound without the threshold, or ascend step by step, up the stairs. Dark when some well known air recalls the strain once oft attuned by a childish voice now hushed in death. Darkness; but only the gloom which now heralds the day-spring of immortality and the infinite light of heaven."

READ TO THE END.—The Scranton Daily Register is responsible for the following anecdote, if not for the fact itself: "A pair of those interesting, entertaining ladies who seem to carry on so large a business in the way of procuring subscriptions for new works, and who are so fascinating in manner, so delightfully importunate, so sweetly unforget-able, called a few mornings since, at a young lawyer's office, for the purpose of getting him to subscribe. "Indeed ladies," said he, "the partnership of which I am but an humble member, has lately been so imprudent as to issue a new work of their own, which, in consequence of the enormous expense attending its illustration, embellishment, &c., has completely crippled us." "Then perhaps," replied the angelic canvassers, "we could procure you some subscribers. What do you call your work?" "Well, we have not fully determined on that yet, but I guess I'll let my wife have her own way, and call it after me—Charles Henry."

ONE of our leading Western merchants, unfortunately, is every year or two led away by the wiles of King Bourbon, and when his periodical fits come on is wont to shut himself up in a room over his store "to sleep it off." On one of these occasions he gave his partner special orders not to allow any one to go into his room. "but," said he, hesitating, "if my wife comes down you may let her come in—she's a particular friend of mine!"

AN enthusiastic old fellow and his wife recently visited Niagara Falls. They worshipped the falls all day, from the piazza in front of their room, and retired talking over its wonders. At an early hour, next morning, the old gentleman was on the qui vive, and as soon as he saw the falls again he sang out: "Wife! wife! I'll be durned if the water ain't still going over that dam!"

AN exchange speaking of the magic strains of a hand organ says:

"When he played 'Old Dog Tray' we noticed eleven pups sitting on their haunches as in front of the machine, brushing the tears from their eyes with their fore paws."

COUNTY CONVENTION.

It will be seen by the proceedings of the Democratic County Committee that the nominating Convention will be held on Monday, the 1st day of July next, and that the delegates will be elected the Saturday previous. We trust our Democratic friends throughout the country will realize the importance of placing in nomination such a ticket as will poll our whole strength, and secure our old fashioned majority. To do this it is essential that every ward, borough and township should send its very best men—men who prize the success of democratic principles more than the personal fortunes of any individual. Let this be done, and the result will give general satisfaction.

COL. LINTON.

We do not exchange with the Harrisburg Telegraph and are indebted to the Alleghanian for the following notice of our member, taken from that paper:

"Cambria county—John P. Linton served his first year in the House last session, and showed early that he is a first class Copperhead. Under the rule of his party at home, Col. L. is entitled to a second nomination, and under the lash of Copperheadism he will of course be re elected."

While admitting the revolutionary antecedents of the editor of the Telegraph, his ancestors having been in the Hessian corps captured by Gen. Washington, we cannot permit him to slander Cambria county in the person of her representative. No man of any party has shown more devotion to the cause of the Union than Col. Linton. His gallant command was in Harrisburg early in April, 1861, and he remained in active service during the whole war. Wounded repeatedly and dargerously, he returned to his post even before his wounds were healed, resumed his command, and was again the victim of a rebel bullet. Indeed, nothing but the simplicity and temperance of his previous life enabled him to survive those injuries which must disable him while he lives. If all this constitutes a "copperhead" there is no danger of such fellows as Bergner ever being known as "copperheads."

To do justice to the Hessian editor he is a little sore on the subject of soldiers, Andy Johnson having removed him from the Harrisburg Post office and given the place to Gen. Knipe, a gallant compeer of Col. Linton in the war for the Union.

SLAVE SUFFRAGE.

The Alleghanian, without denying (as indeed it could not truthfully deny) our proposition that a majority of the Southern slaves were with their masters in the late rebellion in sentiment, as far as they had any sentiment, thinks that ought to reconcile us to their right of suffrage, as they would "gravitate to the Democracy." This does not follow, for though rebels in the war they would be indebted to the Radicals for the boon of suffrage, and hence would most likely espouse their cause.

But suppose, as seems now quite likely to be the case, they do vote with the Democrats! Is not this entirely outside of the question? With us the question is not how they shall vote, but whether they are qualified to vote at all. In the Radical States of the North, or at least in a majority of them, the right of suffrage is denied the negro who has been all his life free, and who has had the benefit of our common schools, &c. In Pennsylvania the Radical Legislature refused to call a Convention to amend the Constitution so as to give the negro a vote.

And yet, while they refuse him a vote where they have the Constitutional power to give it, they seek to confer it upon the hordes of recent slaves in the South, without the shadow of a Constitutional right to do so. Whether the recent slaves vote with their former owners, or with the Northern Radicals, is a mere accident, and their voting on one side or the other is no proof whatever of their qualification for the right of suffrage.

AS WE FEARED.—The negroes are already following in the footsteps of their radical advisers. James H. S. Cheeseman, negro, has been arrested for the larceny of $2,000, which came into his possession as messenger to the Controller of Currency.

MacShane in Washington.

His Arrival—President Johnson—Secretary Seward—Russian Possessions, &c.

LETTER NUMBER THREE.

Thank my stars I am at Washington at last! I tried to get here once before, but, as the vulgar proverb hath it, "the third time is the charm." My first intention to visit this city was in the autumn of 1864, when a determined Yankee shook my resolution considerably. I left home, however, with the consent of my friends, but the "army of the Potomac" prevented my entrance into the Federal city. Last fall I fixed up my traps again for the same voyage, but a "Daniel came to judgment," and I lost my Maine chance. But here I am "on my own hook," and so soon as I get a little breath I shall make a note of "matters and things in general." But, gentle reader, I am wearied and exhausted, and shall seek rest before writing another line. I have fortunately secured one of the very highest rooms at Willard's—so here goes!

* * * * * * * * *

It is a beautiful morning. Dressed, cocktailed and breakfasted. Prepared to "pass muster" among the distinguished Washingtonians, by going into the shaving saloon. This is a hazardous undertaking, as the "colored gentlemen" who "most do congregate" there, when once they get control of your person, seem determined to wreak the fullest vengeance on you. Accordingly, when I was shaved, my whiskers had to be trimmed, my hair cut, my head washed, and then my hair parted behind and combed out on the side of my head like the fins of a fish. In these operations I spent the greater part of the forenoon and 85 cents besides. When I looked into the huge mirror before me I fancied I had never seen a handsomer man. Mrs. MacShane would hardly have known me.

I determined now to make the first use of my time, by calling on

THE PRESIDENT.

President Johnson is about the medium size, and well proportioned; his weight about 160 pounds, his dress is severely plain, his manner cordial, but not without the dignity becoming his station. His dark hair is somewhat sprinkled with gray, and his forehead and face marked with traces of deep thought. Partisan feeling has assailed the President as a man who indulges in strong drink. I certainly never beheld a man whose appearance more clearly belied the charge. Intoxication never was imputed to him by friend or foe, but upon a single occasion—that of the inauguration—and charity should forgive a single error. All persons versed in Biblical lore will recollect that our grand-father Noah, shortly after the great freshet, made the same mistake. And if it had not been for Noah where would the radicals be? Besides, comparatively speaking, it was a youthful indiscretion on the part of the President, whereas Noah was several hundred years of age when he "took too much." I am aware that it has been argued in Noah's favor that the patriarch was perfectly nauseated with water, having been compelled to live on it for more than a year, and would naturally seek anything for a change. But Johnson had been three years fighting the rebellion, which would be at least as much as one year of flood. In short, while my nation is bitterly hostile to ardent spirits, and while the party to which I attached myself as soon as I came to this country (and, in fact, I had a sort of foreign attachment for the Democrats before I left the "Green Isle") has never made the mistake of electing a man who drank too much on inauguration day, and I hope never will, still I, nevertheless, feel disposed to throw the mantle of charity over this single weakness of our President, and even to extend the same charity to the party that elected him. (My gracious! that sentence is long enough to put any man out of breath!)

But I digress from my narrative. President Johnson is in no apprehension of impeachment, besides he says he won't stand it. He says that Congress may raise as much Rump 'us (which is only a contraction for Rump House) as they like, but while a large portion of the Union, including the Russian Possessions, remains unrepresented, he will remain as he has heretofore, unimpeachable.

He is disgusted with the course of the Hollidaysburg Whig. Says he dont know its editor, but that a porkulent man, weighing about 220 lbs, gross weight, made his appearance about the White House last year and promised great things. In answer to a further question, he described him as a smooth, good-humored, easy, greasy man, with a thick skin, and his hair rather loosely located. I tried to reconcile him, but he is self-willed and arbitrary in his likes and dislikes.

HON. WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

Found the venerable Secretary laboring under a slight chill, which he afterwards informed me, he has been suffering under constantly since the purchase of the Russian Possessions. I took occasion to remark that his enemies had attributed the lateness of the season to this Russian acquisition. He smiled and said he was willing to take whatever of praise or censure the new purchase might invoke—"Though in reality," said he, "I got the idea from Gen. Banks." You will recollect that, when in Congress, the General suggested that we should let the Union slide. I know we could not get ice enough for that purpose short of the Russian Possessions." He added, that however much Greeley grumbled, "in sixty days" all parties would be satisfied. I thought about him promising to end the war "in sixty days," but said nothing. He proceeded to enumerate the advantages of the purchase which he divided into different heads:

1. That real estate was the safest investment that could be made, especially when the doubtful character of our bonds is considered.

2. That the payment, being in gold, would remove what remained in the country, and hush the clamor for a return to specie payments.

3. That six millions was a mere trifle. To a man worth three thousand millions it would be nothing, and to a man indebted that much it would be—just the same; and that a nation is like an individual in this respect.

4. It would extend the "area of freedom" over hundreds of thousands of square miles and confer the blessings of civil liberty upon thousands of noble Indians and plodding Esquimaux.

5. That in case the South should vote in a particular way, (Mr. S. didn't say which way—he never does,) this territory would give the "balance of power to the North," and she would have more leverage, being further from the political fulcrum.

6. That it gave us the nearest approach to the Eastern Continent—Behring's Strait being a comparatively narrow piece of water—and that the Atlantic Cable would be supplanted by a direct line through Asia and Europe, the termini to be Washington and London.

7. That it affords the nearest, if not the only, outlet to the North Pole, and while this feature enhanced the importance of the acquisition to us, the Russians found themselves too close to the Poles already.

8. That the material wealth of the country is unbounded—that ice in immense quantities exists, and that men of science have assured him that the crop is exhaustless; that iron and coal exist in great abundance; that the fishery for whales and seals is the greatest in the world, and that the fur trade alone would pay our national debt in a few years.

9. That our country, while abounding in the largest lakes and rivers, and the grandest mountains in the world, wanted one thing—a volcano—and that is to be found at Mt. Elias, in the newly acquired territory.

10. That the next Congress would incorporate a grand company to consist of Simon Cameron, (who can converse with the Indians in their own language,) B. F. Butler and 98 others, to be known as the "Grand National Union Iron, Coal, Fur, Improvement Navigation and Whaling Company," to develop the wealth of this promising acquisition.

I considered his reasons as entirely convincing, and intimated, when he went on to state that he expected the new territory to come in as a State at the next session of the R. Congress, that it had a sufficient population of Indians and Esquimaux, without counting seals and women, to entitle it to an M. C.—and the only thing that puzzled him was the name and coat of arms, desiring me to offer any suggestions I had upon this subject. I felt myself at home on this, and at once named it ALASKA—the name of its principal peninsula—not only on account of the "fitness of things," but because it rhymes with Nebraska. And this is the name it will bear.

For its motto I recommended a seal, as that was the characteristic inhabitant, and also for its simplicity, and argued that as the inhabitants could not read or write, the impression or picture of a seal on their papers would amount to a signature, on the same principle that anciently seals were used before our ancestors could write their names. I suggested, too, that as each State had two seals, a greater and a lesser seal; a full grown seal could be used as the device for the former, and a baby seal for the latter. He agreed to consider the matter, and I took my leave.

Mr. Seward is a spare man, with Auburn hair, and appears as though he had narrowly escaped death. He thinks "whatever is, is right," but don't seem to care much whether it is or not. He says he is entirely out of the radical ring, and therefore didn't use his little bell any longer.

But my letter grows too long. My present purpose is to remain here several weeks, before going North. MACSHANE.

[COMMUNICATED.]

The Teachers' Advocate.

Mr. Editor—My attention has been called by an ardent and zealous advocate of education to a most remarkable article in the May number of the "Teachers' Advocate," entitled "Irregular Attendance." The article is an editorial, in which the writer complains of the evil of the irregular attendance of children at the Common Schools. He says he can see no remedy "short of a judicious compulsory attendance law that will have any considerable beneficial effect upon this evil." And again, after declaiming on the carelessness of parents in this matter, he says: "We repeat, then, that we see no remedy by which this evil can be arrested but a law compelling attendance at school."

It gives us no pleasure to take issue with the editors of the Advocate on this or any other question, for we can assure them we entertain nothing but the kindest feeling for them personally, and would be happy to see them succeed in any honest undertaking. But when they undertake to advocate legislative enactments so manifestly absurd, and so flagrantly opposed to natural law and the liberty of the citizen, we feel that it would be criminal on our part to remain silent.

Before discussing this subject we would respectfully ask the editors a few questions:

1st. When children are irregular in their attendance do you know whether or not the teachers take the trouble to inquire of their parents as to the cause?

2d. Is it or is not obligatory on teachers to make such inquiry?

3d. If it is, are you not aware that it is seldom made?

4th. If it is not the duty of teachers to make such inquiry how are they to know, when a child fails to attend regularly, that he is playing truant, or that his absence cannot be accounted for through a justifiable or excusable cause?

5th. Has not the teacher the right to punish a child for playing truant, as he would for any offence committed in school?

A little reflection on the questions as to the duties of teachers, it seems to us, might have caused the editors of the Advocate to see on whom the responsibility for the evil they complain of rests. When this is once ascertained the remedy might not appear so difficult as they imagine. But they must permit us to say that no matter how great the evil, or on who its cause may rest, the remedy they suggest can never be applied in a free country where the people have any respect for the natural and divine law. A people who could so far forget themselves as to invoke the Legislature to pass an Act of the kind suggested, could, in no sense of the word, be entitled to be called either a free or an intelligent people, and certainly much less a civilized Christian people.

But how are the enactments they advocate, if passed by the Legislature, to be enforced? The editors explain this by quoting, with approbation, an extract from what they are pleased to term a very able report read before the last Convention of County Superintendents by Jesse Newlin, Esq., Superintendent of Schuylkill county. We should like to give your readers this extract in full, but find it would occupy too much space. We will, however, quote a sentence or two. Mr. Newlin, after recommending a compulsory enactment, explains as follows how it is to be enforced: "If the parent, guardian, or other person fails to comply with the provisions of this law, for the first offence he shall be remonstrated with by the teachers or directors; and if he still neglects to send his children, he shall be fined a sum not exceeding twenty dollars, to be appropriated to the use of the schools; or, instead of the fine, a commitment of the child to such institution of instruction or house of correction as may be provided for the purpose, for a period not exceeding one year."

And this proposition is made in a Convention of County Superintendents assembled in the Capitol of our State, without any disapprobation, so far as we have heard!

Where Mr. Newlin was educated we do not know, but we hope, for the honor of Pennsylvania, it was not within her borders. If we were permitted to guess, we would unhesitatingly say New England. But, be this as it may, a better advocate of the ancient Blue Laws of Connecticut could not at this day, perhaps, be found anywhere.

We would ask the editors of the Advocate whence the Legislature derives its power to interfere, in the manner suggested, with parental authority? Certainly not from God, for God cannot violate, much less authorize the violation of, His laws; and if our memory does not fail us, we think there is nothing more clear in the Sacred Scriptures than that God entrusted the care, education and protection of the child to the parents. Then if the Legislature derive no such power from God, is there no other source from which it may derive this power? The editors may answer, Yes! from the people. How and by what means? By the people in their collective capacity as electors. But how come the people by the right to violate the natural rights of individuals? to punish parents when guilty of no crime? to tear from the bosom of the father and the mother, and from the arms of the brother and the sister, the innocent, helpless child, and place it in a house of correction? If the people, then, have no right to commit these barbarous outrages and cruelties, how can they give such a right to their representatives in the Legislature? There is but one theory upon which this kind of legislation could be sustained; and that is that the people were made for the government, and not the government for the people. Do the editors of the Advocate adopt this theory? If they do, then, in order to be logical, they must show that the government has a creative, life-giving power. They must, in short, hold that the government is a deity. If it can create the people, give them life and motion, then it certainly can command and compel them to do whatever it wills. This theory, it will be perceived, would be in consonance with the worst forms of paganism that ever existed; and although the editors of the Advocate would, we have no doubt, deprecate the logical result of such a theory as much as any persons in the community, yet it is clear to us that the powers which they seem to think reside in the Legislature of passing such enactments as they urge, would be to make our government a despotism of the worst type that ever existed on the face of the earth. And it is equally clear they can sustain the law they suggest on no other theory.

If the government possessed such powers let us see what limit, if any, could be put on its legislation. If it could pass laws to punish parents and children for neglecting to embrace the opportunities of education afforded them, what law equally absurd and tyranical could it not pass? But the editors may say this law would be for the benefit of society—if individuals should in certain cases suffer, the public would be benefitted. Who, then, is to be the judge as to the advantages and benefits to society from the passage of such a law? You must answer, the government. Then if the government is to be the judge as to the advantages and benefits to society from the passage of such a law, would it not also be the judge in every imaginable case? Certainly. Then, should the government consider that society would be benefitted by compelling all the children of the Commonwealth to attend the Sabbath Schools of a particular denomination of Christians, under certain pains and penalties for disobedience, one of which would be to send them to "a house of correction for a period not exceeding one year," all would be bound to obey. But suppose, in place of the mild punishment of sending the disobedient children for one year or less to a house of correction, it made the sentence a period not less than ten years, then what would you say? That would be tyrannical, cruel and barbarous! But when you admit the government has the power to make the sentence one year or less, by what right do you undertake to deny its authority and power to make it ten or more years? But, gentlemen, this is not the only difficulty into which your theory would lead you. Could the government not also say that it would be for the benefit of society to compel all the people of the Commonwealth to attend the services in the churches of a particular denomination of Christians, and in no others, under certain pains and penalties for disobedience? Certainly, if you are correct in your theory as to its powers. Again, could it not on the same theory pass an Act appointing a Commission, day of physicians, whose duty it would be to visit all families in the Commonwealth, in order to examine what kind of food they used; and if this Commission believed that a certain kind of food which they found used by certain families, was injurious to their health, they should "remonstrate" with them, and if they should still persist in using it, they should be punished with certain pains and penalties, one of which should be to send the offenders, be they parents or children, to "a house of correction for a period not exceeding one year." But would this law be for the benefit of society? Why not? Is not the Legislature the supreme judge? Could it not be urged with as much plausibility and truth as the enactment proposed by our friends of the Advocate and Jesse Newlin, Esq.? Eminent physicians will tell you that the cause of many cases of suicide might be traced to a diseased liver or stomach. They will also tell you that by eradicating or preventing diseases of this kind the benefits to individuals, families and society would be incalculable—that such diseases are in many instances not only the cause of crime, but that persons suffering with these diseases, coming in contact with the healthy members of society, generally produce a bad effect on the latter class by their sour and irritable manners. Hence they might contend that the only remedy for this evil is to regulate the quality and quantity of food by a government Commission of physicians.

If our friends of the Advocate would make their journal beneficial to society we would respectfully suggest to them, before again putting their views on a subject of this kind in print, to get a good work on the origin, principles and powers of civil governments. They will find by reading a good text book on this subject that the law they advocate, if passed by the Legislature, would not be worth the ink used in printing it. The Legislature can pass no Act in conflict with the natural and divine law that the people would be for a moment bound to obey. Such a law would be null and void ab initio.

We trust that this is the last we shall hear of our County Superintendents and editors of school journals advocating a law that deserves to be branded by no other name than infamous. R.

THE LATEST AND BEST NEWS is that R. H. Singer, who, upon his entree into our town, reduced the price of horse-shoeing one-third, has determined still to lead the van, and offers to work 10 per cent. lower than the lowest for cash, and insures satisfaction. Persons needing tire on their wagons or carriages, can save dollars by giving him their work. "A dollar saved is a dollar gained," and the way to save many of them is to get your blacksmithing done with Mr. Singer, at the west end of town. Mr. S. is also selling I. C. Singer's unequalled Tire and Band Bender—a machine which saves a great amount of time and labor and bends the Tire round and true—of which Wm. Myers, of Altoona, says he would not take $100 and do without. Any amount of testimony just like that can be shown, but the machine is its own best recommendations to a mechanic. Persons wishing to purchase should call on or address R. H. SINGER, Ebensburg.

DEMOCRATIC CONFERENCE.—At a meeting of the Democratic Executive Committee, held in the Court House, Ebensburg, on Wednesday, 15th inst., Capt. H. D. Woodruff was elected Delegate to the State Convention, to be held 11th June, 1867; R. L. Johnston and C. L. Pershing, Esqs., appointed Delegates to State Convention to assemble at call of Chairman of State Central Committee, and Wm. Kittell, John P. Linton and John Blair, Esqs., chosen Delegates to select Senatorial Delegates to the above Conventions.

Saturday the 29th June was fixed for the holding of delegate elections. Convention to be held July 1st, 1867. Adjourned.

GEO. C. K. ZAHM, Ch. Co. Com.

A BRACE OF ACCIDENTS.—On Saturday morning an unfortunate young man was found in a state of suspended animation on High street, his body stretched on the pavement and his head reclining against the front door of one of our business houses. Efforts to restore his wandering faculties were for a time vain, but at length he was raised to his feet, when, with a sudden effort, he broke from those who had him in charge, and rushing some distance, fell prostrate near Blair's hotel. His fall frightened the horse of Mr. G W. Lloyd, of Susquehanna township, one of our staunchest citizens and most enterprising lumbermen, causing the animal to give a sudden jump, which broke the girth and threw Mr. Lloyd into the air, falling on his back and shoulders on the pavement. As Mr. L is a man over fifty years of age and weighing 240 pounds it may well be imagined that his case was regarded with some solicitude by his friends. Dr. Lemmon, who was summoned without delay, soon ascertained, however, that no bones were broken, and the patient will doubtless ere long be himself again. "Wash," upon being congratulated on his escape, good humoredly remarked that it wasn't much of an accident after all—only a "splash." The cause of the mishap—or rather the young man who was imbued with the cause—was kindly provided for by the Sheriff, and has so far recovered as to be able to be out—bailed out.

GARDENING.—While our radical friends are troubled with negro on the brain, the ladies, without distinction of party, have garden on the brain. Go where you will you see them in rapid motion, with seeds, or sprouts, or suckers, or something to plant. Everything they can get must be planted, which looks very much like "running the thing into the ground." A stranger barely escaped their clutches the other day by beating a rapid retreat, merely because his clothes looked seedy! The ladies are for the most part intelligent upon every other question, but upon this subject they seem a little bit crazy—this and ROOM CLEANING. We overheard the conclusion of a dialogue the other day, however, which satisfied us that there is one young lady at least in this community sensible on the subject of gardening. Her mother was urging her at the time to fix the beds (the garden beds, of course,) and as a dernier resort exclaimed: "What will become of the garden when I die and leave it to you?" "Why, dear Ma," replied the affectionate daughter, "when you die—the garden and I—will both go into WEEDS!"

MODESTY.—Somebody makes complaint that an immodest idea was conveyed in one of MacShane's letters to the FREEMAN. Our confidence in "Mac" is such that we pay but slight attention to his MS., but have since looked over his correspondence without being able to find anything in the least tinctured with vulgarity. If our readers take his words in their plain English meaning they will find nothing to make them blush. If, on the other hand, they seek for immodest allusions in everything they read, no composition will stand the test. An old maid once congratulated Dr. Johnson on having no vulgar words in his dictionary. "True, Madam," retorted the intellectual monster, "but I see you have been looking for them."

P. S. Since writing the foregoing we learn that our modest critic was only a borrower of the FREEMAN. Subscribe and it will be all right.

A CAMBRIAN IN IOWA.—We are in receipt of an interesting letter from our old Cambria friend, Mr. WM. D. HUAD. He informs us that many Cambrians are securing homes in his neighborhood. Mr. H. is agent for the sale of large tracts of Western land, which he desires to show such of his old neighbors as emigrate in that direction. His post office is Millersburg, Iowa county, Iowa. He says that Spring wheat and oats have been in the ground for some time in his vicinity.

IMPOSING CEREMONY.—The laying of the corner-stone of the new Catholic church in this place will take place on Tuesday afternoon, June 4th. A large number of clergymen will be in attendance, and the sermon will be preached by Rev. S. Wall, President of St. Michael's Seminary. An immense concourse of people will doubtless be in attendance, as the ceremonies will be unusually grand and interesting.

DID YOU EVER see a greater variety of goods than is displayed at the Jewelry establishment of C. T. Roberts on High street? Clocks, watches, jewelry, musical instruments, photograph albums, school books, stationery, toys, tobaccos, cigars, gent's furnishing goods, cutlery, and a host of other things it takes our breath to think about, much less enumerate. Go and see for yourselves, everybody.

THE END.—Some of the Millerites prophesy the dissolution of all things earthly during the present month, and as there are not many days yet to go on it would be well enough for everybody to buy all they need at the cheap store of Mills & Davis, on High street, before that eventful period arrives. So don't put off till to-morrow what should be done to-day, especially when time and money are both at stake.

EDITORIALITIES, LOCAL AND GENERAL.—RADICAL PRICES—Flour $17 per barrel.

DELECTABLE—The controversy going on between Hoover of the Register and Brotherline of the Whig.

JEFF. DAVIS—The rebel chief is stopping at the N. Y. Hotel. He has selected good quarters, as some of our Ebensburg friends can verify.

CANDIDATES.—Our exchanges are alive with announcements of candidates for the coming campaign. Cambria county don't appear to have any.

GRANT HOUSE.—We cordially recommend this hotel to visitors at Hemlock. Lieut. Wilkin is a landlord who makes everybody feel at home under his roof.

CAPT. H. D. WOODRUFF was unanimously appointed delegate to Harrisburg by the Democratic Committee. It was a deserved honor; and the trust will be faithfully discharged.

CARD.—Our young friend, Robert Devereaux, M. D., it will be seen by his card in another column, has put up his shingle at Summitville. We predict for him a successful professional career.

ODD.—Brotherline of the Whig seems to have got a twinge of the old Anti-Masonic disease remaining in his system, and is down on the Odd Fellows. Wonder if the I. O. O. F. will survive it?

BAD TREATMENT OF NEGROES.—A negro boy was recently struck by lightning near Columbia, S. C. This is a new argument that the South is not yet prepared to enjoy the "blessings of the Union."

TEMPERANCE.—A man down in Maine has recently been tried, convicted and sentenced to pay a fine of sixteen dollars for selling a glass of sweet cider.—Exchange.

Served him right—why didn't he wait till it got "sharp?"

WATCHMAKING, &c.—We invite attention to the card of Mr. Zolner, jeweler and watchmaker. Mr. Z. is a graduate of Mr. Louis Luckhardt, Johnstown, and is fully qualified to perform all work he undertakes.

GIVE IT TO 'EM.—The Huntingdon Monitor is pouring hot shot into the Journal and Lewistown Gazette, in regard to the Radical attempt to sell the Huntingdon P. O. to a democrat, when they could not get it themselves!

WE wish we could approve of an equal number of the acts of the editor of the Freeman.—Alleg.

The Alleghanian is hard to please. Don't believe it's editor would approve of the Acts of the Apostles.

TOBACCO.—Any of our Cambria friends designing to procure the best tobacco and cigars, and meeting the cleverest man in Philadelphia, will do well to call at the huge tobacco store of Dr. Taylor, corner of Market & Fourth streets.

A WHOPPER.—J. D. Hicks writes to the Leader from Tyrone, that he has "learned that there are over 600 whisky-selling shops" in Johnstown. That would embrace about the whole number of "shops" in Johnstown proper.

CLOTHIER AND TAILOR.—The advertisement of Mr. Jacob M. Pircher, Hollidaysburg, will be found in the Freeman to-day. He is well known, we doubt not, to many of our readers, and those who know him will bear us out in the assertion that he is an honest man and a competent mechanic. Read his advertisement and make up your minds, when next you need anything in the clothing line, to give Mr. Pircher a trial. He will be found worthy of all that can be said or done in his behalf.

HUNTINGDON JOURNALISM.—A Scrap of Its History.—The Hollidaysburg Whig of last week says:

"The present proprietors of the Huntingdon Journal say it was established in 1835 by A. W. Benedict, Esq., deceased. This is a mistake. We worked in the office of the Journal in the fall of 1830 and till the spring of 1831, for Henry L. McConnell and John C. McCrea, who were then the proprietors, known as McConnell & McCrea, and who we believe established the concern one or two years or more before we went there."

The editor of the Whig, we submit, is under a mistake in the foregoing article—and the Journal correct. We shall give, according to our recollection, a brief history of the early Huntingdon newspapers.

The "Huntingdon Republican" was started at an early day in Huntingdon, and published by James S. Barbour. Afterwards, as early we think as 1821, the two rival papers in Huntingdon were the "Republican Advocate," published by John Mullay, and afterwards by Mullay & Underwood, which was known as the Democratic organ, and the "Huntingdon Gazette," the Federal organ, published by John M'Cahan, and afterwards by his son, J. Kinney M'Cahan. In 1829, if we remember rightly, Henry L. M'Connell and John C. M'Crea started the first Anti-Masonic paper in Huntingdon under the name of the "Huntingdon Courier," and not the Journal, as Mr. Brotherline states. The Courier passed through several hands in its rather brief career, and in 1834 was published by the late Dr. Jacob Hoffman, under whose control it went down. In 1835, as the Journal states, A. W. Benedict commenced the publication of a new Anti-Masonic paper under the title of the "Huntingdon Journal." We recollect well the advent of Mr. Benedict to Huntingdon, as editor of the new paper. As a declamatory partizan writer he had much ability, and soon gave himself and his friends some trouble by the severity of his personal attacks. He remained several years editor of the Journal, and afterwards commenced the practice of law. He had many good traits of character which will keep him long in the memory even of those who were his most bitter political opponents.

LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.

JOHNSTOWN, MAY 20, 1867.

Dear Freeman—The new Lutheran Church in this place was dedicated yesterday. A large concourse of people were in attendance, no services being held at any of the other Protestant churches. F. W. Conrad, D. D., of Philadelphia, preached the dedicatory sermon, and delivered a most eloquent and acceptable discourse. This handsome church edifice has been erected at a cost of $30,000, of which but $3,600, I am told, yet remains unpaid. The members of this congregation have certainly great cause to be proud of the result of their labors as well as of the promptness with which they have met the outlay consequent upon its erection.

A fair but frail creature named Nancy Norris was taken to the Poor House the other day. She hails from New Florence, but was "splurging" about our town for several days and was finally committed for vagrancy. She is only about 17 years of age, but is a most pitiable object, and her career is another verification of the adage that "the way of the transgressor is hard."

Some eight "cases" were confined in the lock-up on Saturday night. Two of these were young men and strangers in town. Their actions exciting suspicion they were arrested and held for examination. The rest were the usual "drunks" which visit the lock-up monthly, or oftener.

The excavation for a new house on the ground made vacant by the burning of the old Hamilton property, on Main street, has been made, and a large business stand will be immediately erected thereon. The building will be a plank one, and will occupy the entire front of the lot. The Mechanical Works have the contract.

The house and lot occupied by A Yeagley & Brother on the corner of Main and Clinton streets, has been purchased by Mr. Swank, who designs fitting it up for a hardware store and removing thereto. The Drs. Y. have built themselves an office adjoining.

Geo. C. K. Zahm, our popular and efficient Prothonotary, sojourned a few days with us last week. Our county cannot boast a more efficient officer or better man than Mr. Z. SKU BAL.

CARROLLTOWN, MAY 20, 1867.

Dear Freeman—Although the crowded condition of your colums prevented the appearance of "Iago" for the past couple of weeks, yet he feels that in the performance of a solemn duty he is bound to make application for admittance, albeit gracefully yielding to that which alone knows no law—necessity—should he be again excluded or postponed.

It is the painful duty of your correspondent to lament the unfavorable weather of the past three weeks, and the ill results that promise to follow to the agricultural interests of the country. Our farmers in this section are unanimous in their apprehensions of a total failure of many of their crops, heretofore their chief reliance, and many of them feel so much discouraged as to avow their doubts as to the usual return for their labor in any of the chief staples of this section. Not a grain of corn yet planted, in many instances oats yet unsown, and in no instance the usual amount of plowing or preparation of the ground for the planting of crops, owing to the constant rains and unfavorable weather which still continues. Yet "Hope, the charmer, lingers still behind," and it may be that the fears of the present may be dispelled by the fullest fruition in the future. At least we may feel so, and if disappointed, we have time enough for regrets when fears become realities.

The work at the addition to the church is progressing as favorably as the weather will permit. The stone work, under the charge of Mr. Fred. Snyder, is under full headway and ere long the foundation of the improvement will be complete.

Nothing unusual to disturb the equanimity and order of our town has recently transpired, although we are led to expect a breach in the monotony of our lives here by the arrival to-day of the celebrated trained horses and the exhibition that is to be given of their docility and obedience under the directions and control of professional horse tamers. IAGO.

IMPORTANT.—We were just about completing arrangements for going to press when it occurred to us that we should by all means let our readers know that James M. Thompson, on High street, still keeps his complete stock of merchandsie up to the highest point in quantity and down to the lowest point in prices In this good work Jim deserves to be encouraged.

DRIED AND CANNED FRUITS.—In addition to his immense stock of staple goods Mr. Y. S. Barker has recently received a prime lot of dried apples, peaches, prunes, currants, canned fruits and vegetables, raisins, etc. Whatever is needed for personal comfort or family consumption may be found at this establishment at the very lowest prices.

NOTICE.—I will deliver Figge's Horse Hay Fork and Pulley to those who have ordered them from me, as follows: At Scott House, Johnstown, on Saturday, June 1st, and at John A. Blair's Hotel, Ebensburg, on Tuesday, June 4th, 1867.

JOHN HUMPHREYS, Ag't for Cambria Co.

L. W. WILLIAMS, Express Agent, Pa. R. R., while looking out of the car door, near Marysville, on the 17th, was struck on the head by a passing train and so seriously injured that he died in a day or two after.

—Rob't Fogler was executed in Washington, Pa., on the 15th inst., for the murder of Robert W. Dinsmore. He left a written confession in which he charges a son of Hon. Wm. Montgomery with being a paiticipant in the murder, and two others of his sons with being accessories before the fact. Young Montgomery was tried for the crime some time since, but Fogler refused to bear witness against him and he was acquitted.

DIED.

In Clearfield township, on Sunday, 12th inst., Mr. HENRY KRISE, aged 97 years.

Thus has departed another of the pioneers of Cambria county, after having lived almost a century, more than sixty years of which have passed since he opened out the farm upon which he died. May he rest in peace.

Stir Poland starch with a common candle, and it will not stick to the iron and will be much nicer.

Alum or vinegar is good to set colors of red, green or yellow.

Sal soda will bleach very white; one spoonful is enough for a kettle of clothes.

Save your suds for garden plants, or for garden yards, when sandy.

Wash your tea trays with cold suds, polish with a little flour, and rub with a dry cloth.

Frozen potatoes will make more starch than those which are not; they also make nice cake.

A hot shovel held over varnished furniture will take out the white spots.

A bit of glue dissolved in skim milk and water will restore old crape.

Ribbons of any kind should be washed in cold soapsuds, and not rinsed.

If your flat irons are rough, rub them with fine salt, and it will make them smooth.

Oat straw is the best for filling beds, and should be changed once a year.

If you are buying a carpet for durability choose small figures.

A bit of soap rubbed on the hinges of doors will prevent their creaking.

Scotch snuff put in holes where crickets come out will destroy them.

A gallon of strong lye put in a barrel of hard water will make it as soft as rain water.

Half a cranberry on a corn will soon kill it.

Always mend clothing before washing.
